Conclusion

ANGELENO POLL 2026

‘Blame the unknown’

Not personal financial outlook but the abstract concepts of trust in city government and economic disparity show more promise in driving regional pessimism.

More temporal variation

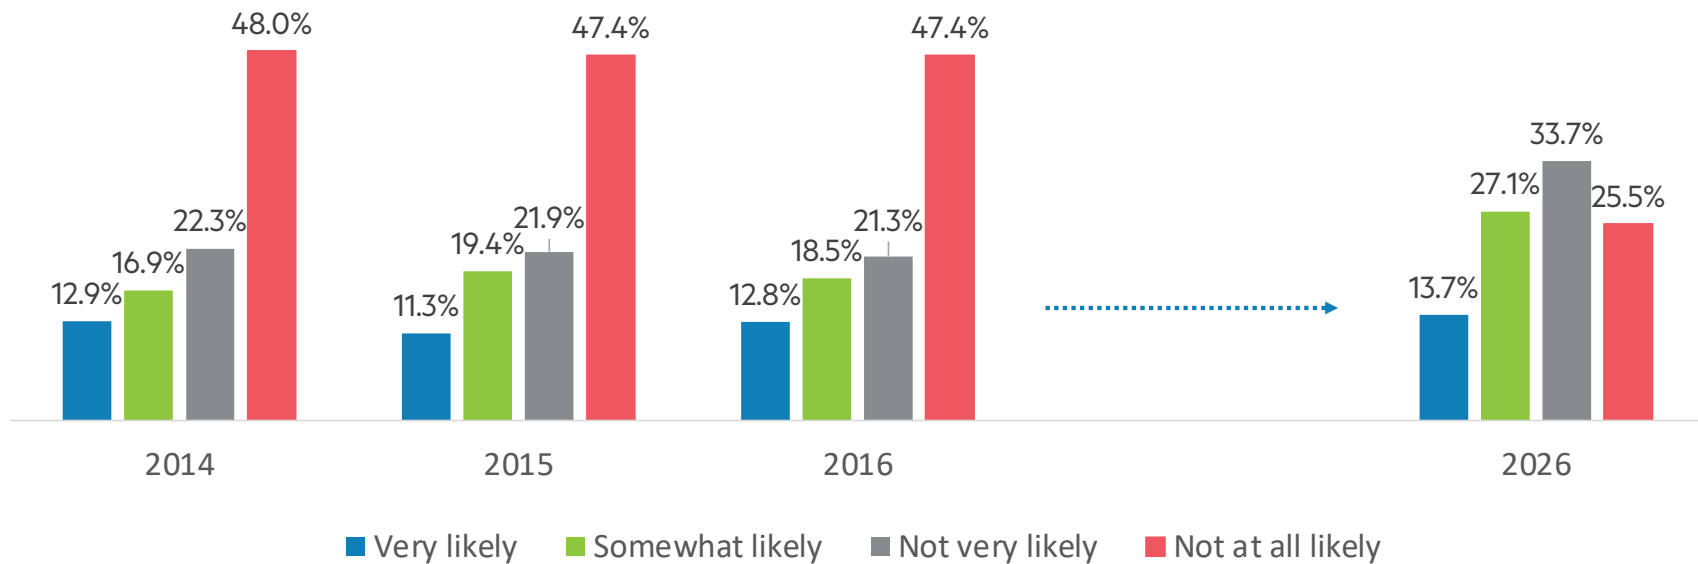

More longitudinal studies asking questions about opinions on institutions essential to a functional democracy.

Sources of sentiment

Study messaging and information sources (abstractions are not created in vacuum)

Appendix

ANGELENO POLL 2026

Logistic Regression Model

Stepwise model building logistic regression (logit) model used for binary DV and categorical IVs:

DV: Regional Direction Measure: general perception of the current state and future prospects of the LA region

IV1: Trust in City Government

How much of the time do you think you can trust the following groups to do what is right? City Government.

Just about always | Most of the time | Only some of the time | None of the time

IV2: Household Finances

How do you expect your household's financial situation to change over the next few years?

Get better | Stay the same | Get worse

ANGELENO POLL 2026

Average Marginal Effects (AMEs)

Translate log-odds into probability changes: the average change in the probability that `dir_region_bin = 1` (right direction) for a 1-unit increase in:

- Trust in city government, evaluated at each observation's actual covariate values
- Outlook on household finances, evaluated at each observation's actual covariate values

- StudyLA is the go-to entity when leaders in Los Angeles want information that will guide decision-making processes toward transformational change

StudyLA develops a study that identifies areas of concern, creates metrics for success, and measures progress.

Partners are able to make data-informed, action-oriented decisions to address areas of concern.

Data are made public and available to community stakeholders also working to address areas of concern.
